How the Congressmen Stand on the Great Question.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.

CAPITOL, WASHINGTON, July 21. - There was an early rush for the House galleries this morning and on the floor in that body there was considerable stir.

It was 11.30 when the Mills bill was reached, and then two amendments correcting errors of type were adopted.

Mr. Mills then took the floor and spoke for about an hour on the measure.

The speaker was given close attention and when he closed there was a remarkable scene

The body was removed to Speer's Morgue. The woman wore a calico skirt and waist, buttoned shoes and blue stockings.

Mrs. Mellhearn, sped sixts years, of Railroad avenue, was instantly killed last evening at the Warren street crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad, being struck by engine 420 of the Lehigh Valley road. She was employed in the depot as a car cleaner and was with Mr. Hogg, of West Virginia. The vote on the final passage of the bill was then taken by roll and resulted:

Yeas, 162. Nays, 149.

Greenman and Bliss, of New York, voted gainst the bill, and Fitch, of the same State.

Sowden, of Pennsylvania, voted no, while Nelson (Rep.), of Iowa, voted for the bill. Mr. McMillan (of Tennessee) moved an adjournment of the Rouse until Wednesday

The motion will probably be carried. The programme is to adjourn frequently from now until the end of the session.

The four Inde, endent members voted yea. When the result of the vote was announced the Democrats were wild with joy and a scena of great enthusiasm followed.

The motion to adjourn until Wednesday was lost, but the House finally took a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

CROOKS WHO HAVE REAPED RICH HAR-A fire which started in the bottom of the elevator in the five-story flat at 150 West One VESTS AT THE RACES. Hundred and Twenty-fourth street at 4.30 o'clock this morning, caused intense alarm among the twenty families living in the building.

How Pool Tickets Were Counterfelted, the Signatures Forged, the Winners Filled In and the Money Collected About of the Good Tickets-Once Mysterious Mispay ments Accounted For.

Almost ever since the present racing season confined almost entirely to the elevator shaft and the roof.

Mr. Lepine, who occupied rooms on the third floor with his family, left the building at 4 o'clock, and at that time there was no fire or smoke observed in the building.

The alarm was first given by Emma Jackson, daughter of Thomas Jackson, who lives on the first floor. She was awakened by smoke, which had filled her room and almost suffocated her. Her mother was awakened by her laby clutching at her throat, and her room was also filled with smoke.

As soon as the alarm was a unded many occupants of the flats rushed for the fire-escapes and left the building, but returned when they learned that the firemen had the flames under control.

The flat are owned by William H. Mehlich and the damage to the building is estimated at $1,000. commenced the bookmakers and pool-sellers at the several race tracks have been victimized to the extent of hundreds of dollars by clever counterfeits of their tickets, which in the burry of cashing in after the races have been passed unnoticed.

The success of the counterfeiters has been so uniform that the bookmakers had to take all possible precautions to prevent forgeries. and to this end had their tickets printed by the American Bank Note Company; but they discovered recently that even these were counterfeited and they were paying bets that were never made.

The counterfeiting of the American Bank at $1,000.

Mrs. James Brown, a tenant on the fifth floor, had her household goods almost entirely destroyed. She is a poor woman and her property was not insured.

The occupants of the rear rooms on the Note Company's issue of tickets has resulted disastrously to the industrious crooks who were playing the game, and they are now beher property was not insured.

The occupants of the rear rooms on the fourth, third and second floors all sustained slight damage from water. They all held insurance policies. The tenants occupying the front rooms suffered no damage.

Janitor William Beech said that he had been unable to determine how the fire originated. There had been no one near the foot of the elevator for several hours previous to the fire event Leuine, who passed by rested as Ed Carington, but is known also by the name of Ed Craiv.

The apprehension of these crooks was brought about in this way:

President James Macdonough, of the American Bank-Note Company, communicated the fact to Inspector Byrnes that forged tickets bearing the trademark of his company had been issued and were being imposed upon the bookmakers and pool-sellers at Monmouth Park, and he de'ailed Detective Sergis. Hawley, Aloncle and Killilea to work up the case. Though unable to find where the forged tickets were printed, the detectives discovered that wood-cuts had been stereotyped at a place in Nassau street, and from the stereotyper learned that the engraver was Hugh Murphy, of 22 Ann street, who resides at Tompkinsville, S. I.

Tompkinsville, S. I.
Going to Murphy's place yesterday morning, Detectives Han ey and Alonele found that Murphy had engraved the plates, and discovered two plates which McDonald and Carrington were to call for at noon.

Carrington were to call for at noon. Both were counterfeits of the American Bank-Note Company's issues.

One was a counterfeit of the tickets issued by J. Cotton & Co., the bookmakers, of Courch street, and the other of J. Connors & Co., whose office is in West Twenty-eighth street. Murphy said that photographs on wood of Murphy said that photographs on wood of the tickets were brought to him to be engraved, and electrotypes of the wood engraving were afterwards made.

In the case of Cotton's ticket a "plug" was inserted in the centre of the plate and the name J. Cotton engraved upon it in fac simile of the original ticket.

There was also tound another block with a photograph of a mutuel pool ticket to be engraved, showing that the two crooks were engaged in a wholesale swindle of the race-graved, showing that the two crooks were engaged in a wholesale swindle of the race-track gamblers. The detectives left the plates there and with the political management of the County Democracy machine.

It is hinted that Commissioner Purroy's letter will be a lengthy one, and that while he will not arraign the County Democracy leaders as individuals he will find much fault with the political management of the County Democracy machine.

Police Justice Maurice J. Power, the leader of the County Democracy, does not attach much importance to Commissioner Purroy's sece sion. The Judge intimates in an interview that Commissioner Purroy has been estranged from the councils of the organization for some time, and the disaffection has caused little surprise and not much comment among the leaders.

Gen. Boulanger Removed to Paris. PARTS July 21.—Gen. Boulancer has so far improved that he was able to bear removal to-day from Count Dillon's villa in Neuilly to his residence here. The General is anxious to get outdoor again, and has no intention of relinquishing his political crusade. He is not cast down by his mishap, which he regards as a mere accident due to his own carelessness and by no means intentional on the part of M. Floquet.

Success of the Canadian Rifemen. INT CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION. London, July 21 .- The Canadian rifle team has ended its campaign at Wimbledon. It has been remarkably successful, winning more prizes in money than in any previous year.

They claim they would have taken the Kolipon Cup had the weather not been against them. In every other aspect they consider their visit satisfactory.

BROKER UNDER HILL SHOT.

A Bullet from an Unseen Weapon Wounds Him at a Bath Beach Hop.

In the midst of the hop and festivities for which Kathlenn Villa was brilliantly illuminated at Bath Beach last night came pistol shots and a man's groan of anguish.

Charles Underhill, a New York broker, aged about thirty years, fell with a bullet wound in his abdomen. He was ascending the front steps of the villa at the time with a young lady.

The screams of the lady brought all the crowd in the vi la about the wounded man.

The shots come from a source not known, hough there is a story of men running from he grounds af er they were fired, and Mr. Underhill says he knows of no enemies who would have been likely to attack him.

Mr. Underhill's wound is a serious one, and may even prove atal.

"So it was for the sake of my money, forsoth, that you jilted pretty Alice Irving," she cried. "I always admired that girl's pluck in hiding any feeling she might have had on the su ject. Now that her grandfather has made her his heiress, as I have just learned"—

Mr. Peyton's face grew scarlet.

"I always esteemed the young lady," he exclaimed wehemently. "It was your wiles that entangled me. I will see her"—

"Do!" cried the widow exultingly. "and she will tell you that she is engaged to Frank Moore, as I have just heard. Ha, ha, ha!"

And she had the best of it really, for she left Perth the next morning, while poor Peyton had to remain and meet his direct balls and witness.

Frank ?" asked How. ard Peyton of his companion, Frank Moore. who had just bowed to a finely dressed and rather showy lady whom they passed. Frank paused a moment before replying : there was a queer twinkle in his eye, and his roice had an old tone in it. 'I don't know very much about her, but I've heard her called 'the rich widow,' and ber name is Mrs. Gordon Hastings."

'She bowed very gracefully," said Peyton. " Seems a pity that she should waste her smiles on such an ungrateful subject. Wish I knew her!" "Let me introduce you!" cried Frank, with sudden animation. 'Her charming smiles were due you only. I can claim no share in them, for I saw that you were the object of attraction."

Just then a group of lovely looking girls passed them. By far the handsomest and liveliest of the party was Alice Irving, poor Frank Moore's object of secret adoration. He changed color when he heard her merry laugh, and as soon as she caught sight

"Ha. ha. ha!" laughed Peyton. "How unsophist cated you are, my dear fellow! Miss Irving is far wiser. I am sure, and values my attentions as they deserve."

the world. I wasn't born with a fortune, though I came in o the world with a most decided taste for enjoying one. Then what is left for me to do? Why, to marry, of course. And now you understand how utterly absurd it would be in me to have serious intentions towards any one who hadn't the necessary Mr. Frank Moore drew a long breath and remained silent a few seconds. Mr. Peyton smoked his cigar in an easy manner, and, watching the smoke as it curled up gracefully, remarked : "I should like to get an introducton to Mrs. Gordon Hastings. She's quie in my "Would you, really?" exclaimed Frank, sudenly changing his expressi n and manner. "I'l present you right away—at Mrs. Dashout's party, to-night, if you s.y so."

"Of course I say so. That k you a thousand times! And—stay a moment—I have an unsophist exted you are, my dear fellow!
Miss Irving is far wiser, I am sure, and values my attentions as they deserve."

"And do you pretend to say, sir," exclaimed Frank, with a decidedly heightened color, "that you have been going everywhere with Miss Irving, seeing her daily, and showing her the most marked regard, merely to kill time?"

"Fact, my dear boy—fact, upon my honor! There, now, don't be absurd, and try to get angry, for it will only spoil our agreeable intercourse. You see, Moore, I am a man of

I am very rich-in graces of person, manner, &c. "
That very night Mrs. Gordon Hasting, greeting Frank Moore at Mrs. Dashout's, complimented him on the style and appearance of his friend Peyton.

She had already learned his name, it appeared, and she added with an affectation of carelessness:
"Is he not one of the rich Peytons?"

"Is he not one of the rich Peytons?"

"I know nothing of his family connections." replied Frank. "but I have heard from his own lips that he is worth a great deal."

"the just as I thought?" sapled Mrs. Gov. deal."
"Ah, just as I thought!" replied Mrs. Gordon Hastings, smiling. "Then he is indeed one of the rich Pey.ons.
"Be that as it may," said Frank. "he greatly de-ires an introduction to you, and awaits your permission with much anxiety.
"Oh. by all means, with much pleasure!" cried Mrs. Gordon Hastings, delightedly.
